About Buford Foundation:

Each year, Camp Confidence wilderness programs help propel adolescent boys and girls to new levels of confidence, self-reliance, and responsibility.

These one- and two-week wilderness camps, which take place in Wyoming, challenge youth to succeed where they have never succeeded before. The experiences instill confidence and foster self-reliance, changing the lives of the campers by challenging them to recognize their talents and potentials. These camps help youth

- develop confidence
- cultivate self-reliance
- discover mutual respect
- appreciate and celebrate diversity
- nurture intuition and natural curiosity
- acquire a spirit of understanding and cooperation
- strive to realize their full potential

Camp participants, who come from all socio-economic and cultural backgrounds, pay no fees to participate in the camps. All costs are covered through the generosity of supportive individuals such as you.
